ANU Library Databases

The Library's E-resources and databases are electronic information repositories that can include collections of electronic journals, indexes, collections of electronic books, or multimedia publications. They contain a wealth of scholarly information which you can use for your research, and are easy to access from the Library's homepage. If you already know the name of the database you wish to use, you can access it by clicking on the letter of the alphabet that corresponds to the first letter of the database's name.

Alternately, if you're not sure which databases to use, click on the E-resources & databases link. This will take you to a page where you can select your databases by subject area.

Simply select the appropriate subject area, click GO, and you will be presented with a range of databases, all containing materials relevant to the area of research you have chosen.

In the example below, we have selected “Multidisciplinary” as our subject area. There are 105 databases catalogued under this heading, which provide materials that span a wide range of different subject areas. Remember, you may find materials relevant to your research in a variety of different databases, which may cover a range of different academic subject areas other than the one in which you are currently working. To gain access to a database and begin searching, simply click on its name, and in most cases you will be taken directly in to the database. You may also navigate amongst databases by searching for them by name, or alternately, a complete list of databases can also be displayed.

The screenshot shows a search interface titled "Multidisciplinary e-resources and databases". At the top, there is a navigation bar with "Start over" and a link to "Check the Full Text E-Journals list". Below this is a search area with a grid of letters A-Z and a search box containing "(choose a subject)". There are also search boxes for "Search by title:" and "Show all e-resource titles". Below the search area, it indicates "1 to 25 of 105" results. A pagination bar shows "1" selected, with buttons for "2", "3", "4", "5", and "Next 25". The main content area lists 9 databases, each with a "show details" link:

ANU Library Full Text E-Journals

The Library’s full text e-journals are electronic information repositories, which can include collections of electronic journals, electronic books, or multimedia publications. They contain a wealth of scholarly information to support your research, and are easy to access from the Library’s homepage. If you already know the name of the e-journal you wish to use, you can search for it by title from the homepage.

The screenshot shows the ANU Library Full Text E-Journals search interface. It has three tabs: "SuperSearch", "Catalogue search", and "Full text e-journals". The search box contains "literature and history" and a "GO" button. Below the search box, there are links for "advanced e-journals search (A-Z) »" and "e-journals search tips »". At the bottom, there is a section titled "E-resources & databases »" with a grid of letters A-Z.

Alternately, if you're not sure which databases to use, click on the advanced e-journals search (A-Z) link. This will take you to a page where you can access journals via a number of different methods.

SuperSearch

SuperSearch enables you to search the Library's entire collection, helping you to find full text journal and newspaper articles, print and electronic books, websites, etc. Enter your search terms into the search box located on the Library's home page, and click on GO.

The screenshot shows the SuperSearch interface with three tabs: "SuperSearch" (selected), "Catalogue search", and "Full text e-journals". Below the tabs is a search box containing the text "asylum seekers" "immigration policy" Australia. To the right of the search box is a "GO" button. Below the search box are two links: "advanced SuperSearch »" and "about SuperSearch »".

Alternately, you can select the advanced SuperSearch option, which will enable you to search for material by Title, by Author, by Publication, etc. These options can be accessed via the "All Fields" fields, which can in turn be combined using Boolean Operators, if desired. Searching in this way also enables you to refine your search parameters and search for only items with full text available online, as well as peer-reviewed and scholarly materials. You can also specify the publication dates of the material you find, and exclude certain types of materials from appearing in your search results.

The screenshot shows the ANU Library SuperSearch advanced search interface. At the top right, there are links for "RefWorks Log In", "Feedback", and "Help". The main header includes the ANU Library logo, "SuperSearch", and "Basic search". The search area contains two search boxes, each with a dropdown menu set to "All Fields" and a plus sign icon. Below the search boxes is a "Publication date" section with a dropdown menu set to "ANC" and another dropdown menu set to "All Fields". There are also "from" and "to" date input fields with calendar icons. A link "Fewer search options >" is visible. The interface is divided into several filter sections: "Content type" (with checkboxes for Any Type, Archival Material, Art, Audio Recording), "Discipline" (with checkboxes for Any Type, agriculture, anatomy & physiology, anthropology), "Language" (with a dropdown menu), "Limit to" (with a checkbox for Peer reviewed publications), "Exclude from results" (with checkboxes for Newspaper articles, Book Reviews, Dissertations), and "Expand your results" (with a checkbox for Include results from outside your library's collection). At the bottom, there is a "Search" button, a "Clear Form" link, and a "Basic search" link.

Once you have performed your search, your results may be narrowed down, or "refined," by using the filters which can be found on the left-hand side of the search results screen. You may wish you limit your results to only those for which the full text is available online. Similarly, limiting your results to materials from scholarly and/or peer-reviewed sources, will help to ensure that the materials you find are accurate, and authoritative. You may further refine your search by specifying the type of content you wish to review, as well as the dates of publication. Materials can also be viewed by academic discipline, as well as by subject headings, which organise your results into a series of pre-defined subject areas. To view an item’s abstract, simply click “Preview.” If you wish to access the full details of a particular item, you may click on its title. To access materials which are available online, you may click on the item’s title, or on the Full Text Online link which appears at the bottom of the item record.

The screenshot shows the ANU Library SuperSearch interface. The search query is "asylum seekers" "immigration policy" Australia. The results are sorted by relevance and show 410 results. The left sidebar contains filters for content type, publication date, and discipline. The main content area displays three search results, each with a preview and a "Full Text Online" link.

ANU Federation Login

The Federation Login allows current members of the ANU community to access ANU Library content from an external computer, located off-campus, or outside of the ANU's network.

Access to some online services is restricted to on-campus only, as the information may have licensing restrictions, or is only relevant to people associated with the University.

When you request a restricted page from off-campus, you will be asked to verify that you are a member of the ANU community by entering your seven digit ANU ID and password.

Your ID begins with a lower case letter "u" and is followed by 7 subsequent digits. For example: u1234567.
