During the last quarter of 2017, the Pauline Griffin Building was demolished to make way for the upcoming new Research School of Social Sciences for the College of Arts and Social Sciences. Approvals to date have enabled the construction team to establish the site with temporary accommodation and demolish the existing structure.

In the coming weeks there will be ongoing enabling works that will see the Ellery Crescent footpath widened to further ensure the safe passage of pedestrians past the RSSS construction zone whilst continuing to allow for two way use of Ellery Crescent for purposes of deliveries and other authorised vehicles.

UPCOMING SITE ACTIVITIES TO NOTE OVER THE COMING TWO WEEKS:

- Stage 1: Week commencing 5 March there will be plant and equipment brought to site to demolish some existing road elements to facilitate a slight realignment of Ellery Crescent directly in front of the RSSS construction site. These works are expected to take 2-3 days.

- Stage 2: Week Commencing 12 March the workface will switch to the Baldessin Precinct multistorey carpark side of Ellery Crescent and will see a realignment of the road barriers, partial demolition of pram ramps and an infill section of footpath poured. These works are expected to take the entirety of the week to complete.

If you have any concerns regarding this communication bulletin or other issues relating to the RSSS Project, please contact Neill Daily from ANU Facilities & Services Division via the below contact details.

E. neill.daly@anu.edu.au
P. 02 6125 0545
EXT. 50545